

Special Issue

Advances in Sustainable Tourism and Responsible Travel

Message from the Guest Editor

In recent years, the concept of sustainable tourism has been embraced by academics and policymakers. Sustainable tourism requires all members of the tourism system, including travelers, to contribute towards sustainability goals. While much of the research to date has focused on destination and business responses to sustainability, there is a significant gap in our understanding of consumers and their efforts towards responsible travel. This Special Issue of Sustainability aims to present new advances in sustainable tourism and responsible travel. It will include papers focusing on (though not limited to):

- operationalizing sustainable tourism;
- governance issues in achieving sustainability;
- SDGs and tourism;
- the relationship between CSR and destination sustainability;
- sustainable supply chain development;
- sustainable product design and innovation;
- indicators of sustainable tourism;
- pro-environmental behavior and tourism;
- applications of behavioral economics to achieve sustainable tourism outcomes; and
- flight shaming, environmental guilt, and tourism
