Ambient Air Pollution Exposure and Human Health

Message from the Guest Editors

Human exposure to ambient air pollutants has been a global public health concern for decades. The World Health Organization (WHO) estimates that almost all of the worldwide population (99%) breathe air that exceeds WHO guidelines and contains high levels of pollutants. The topics of interest, on which authors are invited and welcome to submit original research papers, reviews, and short communications, include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Exposure assessment in the microenvironments impacted by ambient air pollution;
- Spatial and temporal analyses on the mobile sources and human health impact;
- Impact of wildfire and drought on local/regional air pollution and toxic health effects;
- Ambient air pollution penetration indoor air quality problems;
- Real-time and continuous monitoring data and novel data modeling and analyses methodology;
- Evaluation of health risk assessments derived from ambient air pollution.
