Environmental Impacts on Urban Health and Well-Being—Sectoral Components towards Understanding the Urban System

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue shall cover publications on tools, methodologies and analyses results of all four sectors that result in a quantitative description of sectoral and multi-sectoral impacts on urban health and urban well-being. Since the sectoral impacts differ for different cities, this Special Issue focuses on intermediate sized cities of the global North (1 to 4 Million inhabitants).

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Urban Science is a scholarly international journal which provides a platform for the exchange of theories, ideas, methods, analyses, and comparative studies of urban and regional development. It is a peer-reviewed, open access journal that publishes high quality original articles, theoretical essays, critical reviews, research notes, and shorter communications. Its broad definition of “science” includes both quantitative and qualitative methods of social, environmental, and spatial analysis. There is no restriction on the maximum length of the papers.
