Urban Trends: Cities, Housing Markets, Regional Dynamics and Tourism

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue, “Urban Trends: Cities, Housing Markets, Regional Dynamics and Tourism”, focuses on analysing and critically reflecting on the current challenges and trends shaping the development of cities, metropolitan regions, and tourism destinations. The aim is to bring together relevant academic and professional contributions that explore the links between rental theories, property markets, urban housing, tourism, spatial planning, local development, and urban transport in order to better understand the complex transformations of urban and tourism-driven spaces. This Special Issue includes the following topics, among others: The impact of property and rental markets on the availability of housing and tourist accommodation in urban destinations; Tourism-induced urban changes: Gentrification, short-term rentals and spatial inequality; Integrated spatial planning for sustainable smart cities and tourism destinations; Public space, urban quality of life and tourism pressure in metropolitan regions; Urban transport systems and their role in sustainable mobility for residents and/or tourists.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Urban Science is a scholarly international journal which provides a platform for the exchange of theories, ideas, methods, analyses, and comparative studies of urban and regional development. It is a peer-reviewed, open access journal that publishes high quality original articles, theoretical essays, critical reviews, research notes, and shorter communications. Its broad definition of “science” includes both quantitative and qualitative methods of social, environmental, and spatial analysis. There is no restriction on the maximum length of the papers.
