Vaccines and Vaccine Adjuvants/Immunomodulators for Infectious Diseases 2.0

Message from the Guest Editors

The importance of vaccination has gained much attention, again, due to the advent of COVID-19 pandemic. Vaccine adjuvants and/or immunomodulators, either directly or indirectly, have become an indispensable component for many (if not all) vaccines, including RNA, DNA, recombinant proteins, inactivated and attenuated, and viral vector vaccines. We invite potential researchers to submit a research article or a comprehensive/mini/ opinion review article related to vaccines and vaccine adjuvants/immunomodulators against infectious diseases. About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Vaccines (ISSN 2076-393X) has had a 6-year history of publishing peer-reviewed state of the art research that advances the knowledge of immunology in human disease protection. Immunotherapeutics, prophylactic vaccines, immunomodulators, adjuvants and the global differences in regulatory affairs are some of the highlights of the research published that have shaped global health. Our open access policy allows all researchers and interested parties to immediately scrutinize the rigorous evidence our publications have to offer. We are proud to present the work and perspectives of many to contribute to future decisions concerning human health.
