COVID-19 Vaccination—a Global Perspective

Message from the Guest Editors

In 2019, the severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS CoV -2), the cause of coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19), rapidly spread across the globe. It was declared a pandemic in March 2020. Over the past two years, the COVID-19 pandemic has placed immense strain on global health care systems. The development of effective vaccines provided muchneeded hope of an end to the pandemic. However, vaccination efforts have been hindered by challenges such as inequities in access and hesitancy to accept the vaccines. The aim of this Special Issue is to expand our understanding of COVID-19 vaccination from a global perspective. Original research and review articles focused on vaccine acceptance, vaccine equity, and vaccination of populations at risk are of great interest.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Vaccines (ISSN 2076-393X) has had a 6-year history of publishing peer-reviewed state of the art research that advances the knowledge of immunology in human disease protection. Immunotherapeutics, prophylactic vaccines, immunomodulators, adjuvants and the global differences in regulatory affairs are some of the highlights of the research published that have shaped global health. Our open access policy allows all researchers and interested parties to immediately scrutinize the rigorous evidence our publications have to offer. We are proud to present the work and perspectives of many to contribute to future decisions concerning human health.
