Immunology and Epidemiology of Infectious Diseases and Infection

Message from the Guest Editors

The Special issue section “Immunology and Epidemiology of Infectious Diseases and Infection” address an extended forum to advancing knowledge on the biological, immunological and epidemiological aspects of infections caused by pathogens; new insights into the mechanisms of infection; interactions of virulence factors with host cells; innate and adaptive immunity to infection; development of vaccines against pathogens that may lead to better diagnostic tools for prevention in epidemiology and Immunology of infectious diseases. This section combines original research articles and reviews on all aspects of infection in humans and animals. We sincerely welcome the scientific community contribution to the research on the infectious diseases immune system, epidemiology and its related infections.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Vaccines (ISSN 2076-393X) has had a 6-year history of publishing peer-reviewed state of the art research that advances the knowledge of immunology in human disease protection. Immunotherapeutics, prophylactic vaccines, immunomodulators, adjuvants and the global differences in regulatory affairs are some of the highlights of the research published that have shaped global health. Our open access policy allows all researchers and interested parties to immediately scrutinize the rigorous evidence our publications have to offer. We are proud to present the work and perspectives of many to contribute to future decisions concerning human health.
