

Special Issue

Immunology and Protective Efficacy of Adjuvanted Vaccines

Message from the Guest Editors

We would like to invite scientists and researchers to share their valuable knowledge and experience by contributing to this special issue, which is focused on the recent scientific developments and current trends in adjuvanted vaccines and delivery systems, and their impact on the immune system. Kindly contribute with an original article, observation or review to highlight (i) the role of adjuvants/delivery systems to enhance antigen delivery or uptake, (ii) the adjuvanted vaccines mechanism of action, (iii) immune response elicited in response to adjuvanted vaccines, and (iv) recent advances in the development and application of novel prophylactic and therapeutic adjuvanted vaccines.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Vaccines (ISSN 2076-393X) has had a 6-year history of publishing peer-reviewed state of the art research that advances the knowledge of immunology in human disease protection. Immunotherapeutics, prophylactic vaccines, immunomodulators, adjuvants and the global differences in regulatory affairs are some of the highlights of the research published that have shaped global health. Our open access policy allows all researchers and interested parties to immediately scrutinize the rigorous evidence our publications have to offer. We are proud to present the work and perspectives of many to contribute to future decisions concerning human health.
