

Special Issue

Communicable Diseases: New and Old Therapies and Preventive Strategies, 2nd Edition

Message from the Guest Editors

The emergence of new pathogens requires the ongoing development of preventive and therapeutic strategies. Additionally, the increasing concern surrounding antimicrobial resistance necessitates innovative methods and tools to combat the spread of established pathogens. We invite contributions to this Special Issue, which aims at publishing articles focused on new preventive strategies and therapies while discussing the challenges and benefits of existing approaches. We welcome original research articles, commentaries, research protocols, and reviews. Research topics may include the development of new vaccines or therapies, the efficacy of novel preventive strategies, and the current gaps in available therapies and preventive measures.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Vaccines (ISSN 2076-393X) has had a 6-year history of publishing peer-reviewed state of the art research that advances the knowledge of immunology in human disease protection. Immunotherapeutics, prophylactic vaccines, immunomodulators, adjuvants and the global differences in regulatory affairs are some of the highlights of the research published that have shaped global health. Our open access policy allows all researchers and interested parties to immediately scrutinize the rigorous evidence our publications have to offer. We are proud to present the work and perspectives of many to contribute to future decisions concerning human health.
