Special Issue

The Role of Mucosal Immune System in Intestinal Inflammatory Disorders

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to unravel different pathogenic immune cell subsets and mediators that contribute to chronic intestinal inflammation, as well as novel and tailored treatment strategies. Original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include the following: analysis of inflammation-associated cellular and molecular mediators in patients with chronic inflammation or in mouse models; biomarker studies in serum from patients and novel strategies to identify resistance/susceptibility to treatment and predict relapse-free remission. We look forward to receiving your contributions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Vaccines (ISSN 2076-393X) has had a 6-year history of publishing peer-reviewed state of the art research that advances the knowledge of immunology in human disease protection. Immunotherapeutics, prophylactic vaccines, immunomodulators, adjuvants and the global differences in regulatory affairs are some of the highlights of the research published that have shaped global health. Our open access policy allows all researchers and interested parties to immediately scrutinize the rigorous evidence our publications have to offer. We are proud to present the work and perspectives of many to contribute to future decisions concerning human health.
