Monkeypox Vaccination in Non-endemic Countries: Considerations for Public Health and Policy

Message from the Guest Editor

With the start of vaccination campaigns, this Special Issue is intended to collect research articles and evidence summaries on this topic. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Monkeypox vaccine acceptance, hesitancy, and refusal;
- Monitoring of monkeypox vaccines, including safety, immunogenicity, and effectiveness, with assessments of differences according to the immune status of vaccines;
- Policy issues, with reference to vaccine deployment, equitable access, and communication strategies for encouraging vaccine uptake.

Furthermore, as the monkeypox epidemiology evolves, other questions will arise.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Vaccines (ISSN 2076-393X) has had a 6-year history of publishing peer-reviewed state of the art research that advances the knowledge of immunology in human disease protection. Immunotherapeutics, prophylactic vaccines, immunomodulators, adjuvants and the global differences in regulatory affairs are some of the highlights of the research published that have shaped global health. Our open access policy allows all researchers and interested parties to immediately scrutinize the rigorous evidence our publications have to offer. We are proud to present the work and perspectives of many to contribute to future decisions concerning human health.
