Vaccines and Cancer Immunology

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to address the knowledge gap in the uses, mechanisms, efficacy, and adverse events of the developed or still-in-development vaccines for preventive and/or therapeutic uses in cancer; or non-cancer vaccines affecting cancer immunology or prognosis. In this Special Issue, original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Cancer vaccines in clinical practice
- Cancer vaccine basic science and immunology
- The effect of non-cancer vaccines on the clinical course of cancers

We look forward to receiving your contributions.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Vaccines (ISSN 2076-393X) has had a 6-year history of publishing peer-reviewed state of the art research that advances the knowledge of immunology in human disease protection. Immunotherapeutics, prophylactic vaccines, immunomodulators, adjuvants and the global differences in regulatory affairs are some of the highlights of the research published that have shaped global health. Our open access policy allows all researchers and interested parties to immediately scrutinize the rigorous evidence our publications have to offer. We are proud to present the work and perspectives of many to contribute to future decisions concerning human health.
