Vaccination in Solid Organ Transplant Recipients

Message from the Guest Editor

In this Special Issue of Vaccine, we focus on recent progresses made in the field of vaccinology, as well as future directions identified for solid organ transplant patients. Based on your extensive knowledge and experience, we invite you to contribute with an original report, personal point of view, or review to highlight (i) specific organization models proposed to improve vaccination rate in this population, (ii) immune pathways developed to improve immunogenicity of vaccines or alternative strategies for transplant recipients, (iii) future directions concerning the development of new vaccines.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Vaccines (ISSN 2076-393X) has had a 6-year history of publishing peer-reviewed state of the art research that advances the knowledge of immunology in human disease protection. Immunotherapeutics, prophylactic vaccines, immunomodulators, adjuvants and the global differences in regulatory affairs are some of the highlights of the research published that have shaped global health. Our open access policy allows all researchers and interested parties to immediately scrutinize the rigorous evidence our publications have to offer. We are proud to present the work and perspectives of many to contribute to future decisions concerning human health.
