

Special Issue

Antimicrobial Resistant Sexually Transmitted Infections: Epidemiology, Detection, and Management

Message from the Guest Editors

Antimicrobial resistance (AMR) has become one of the most critical public health problems of our time, and we have begun to enter the post-antibiotic era. AMR in sexually transmitted infections is an increasing concern, and there is a clear need to understand the scope of this problem, and to determine the most appropriate methods of management and techniques of detection. In this Special Issue, we are therefore seeking to receive submissions regarding AMR in sexually transmitted infections, as well as innovative ways to address this problem.

Guest Editors

Dr. Karan Varshney

School of Public Health and Preventive Medicine, Monash University, Melbourne, Australia

Prof. Dr. Michael Ross

Program in Human Sexuality, Department of Family Medicine and Community Health, University of Minnesota Medical School, Minneapolis, MN, USA

Deadline for manuscript submissions

closed (31 July 2024)

Venerology

an Open Access Journal
by MDPI

mdpi.com/si/144980

Venerology
MDPI, Grosspeteranlage 5
4052 Basel, Switzerland
Tel: +41 61 683 77 34
venerology@mdpi.com

[mdpi.com/journal/
venerology](https://mdpi.com/journal/venerology)

Venereology

an Open Access Journal
by MDPI

[mdpi.com/journal/
venereology](https://mdpi.com/journal/venereology)

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Editor-in-Chief

Prof. Dr. Jacek C. Szepietowski

Department of Dermatology, Venereology and Allergology, Wrocław
Medical University, ul. T. Chałubińskiego 1, 50-367 Wrocław, Poland

Author Benefits

Rapid Publication:

manuscripts are peer-reviewed and a first decision is provided to authors approximately 56.3 days after submission; acceptance to publication is undertaken in 6.9 days (median values for papers published in this journal in the second half of 2024).

Recognition of Reviewers:

APC discount vouchers, optional signed peer review, and reviewer names published annually in the journal.