Diagnosis and Epidemiology of Cattle Infectious Diseases

Message from the Guest Editor

The cattle industry is a pillar industry in animal husbandry, providing people with high-quality food, protein, and nutrition, such as milk and beef. However, infectious diseases are an important factor restricting the benefits of cattle farming and are also an important factor affecting food safety, public health, and the healthy and sustainable development of the cattle industry. The journal Veterinary Sciences has launched a Special Issue on the "Diagnosis and Epidemiology of Cattle Infectious Diseases", aiming to gather the latest research results in this field, promote the theoretical and technological progress of cattle infectious disease prevention and control, and promote the improvement of clinical prevention and control skills.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Veterinary Sciences (ISSN 2306-7381) is an international and interdisciplinary scholarly open access journal that aims at publishing research in all fields of veterinary medicine in a democratic way. We encourage scientists to publish their original research articles, reviews, communications, and short notes in as much detail as possible. Articles submitted that involve subjecting animals to unnecessary pain or suffering will not be accepted, and all articles must be submitted with the necessary ethical approval (please refer to the Ethical Guidelines for more information).
