Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Disability is a multidimensional construct and is the product of complex and situational interactions between an individual's attributes and their environments. This broadens the perspective of disability and allows for the examination of individual, social, and environmental influences on functioning, disability, and ability occurring in historical and cultural settings. Consequently, Disabilities is inclusive of all types of disability, across all ages and contexts. We particularly welcome articles from low- and middle- income countries and articles that are authored/co-authored by people with the lived experience of disabilities.

Aims

Disabilities (ISSN 2673-7272) is an open access journal covering a broad range of issues related to the physical, biopsychosocial, and environmental aspects of disability. Disabilities invites submissions from a range of topics that relate to how individual and contextual factors interplay with and impact the lives of persons with disabilities, and the implications these have on theory, methodology, policy, and practice. We welcome topics related to the impact of physical and mental health disabilities on social participation, interactions between disabilities and the environment, disability theory, and methodological advancements in studying topics related to disability.

Scope

The following list of topics is provided as a guide to outline the relevant research areas and is not intended to be exhaustive:

- Rehabilitation including assistive technology
- Assessments of and interventions for physical and mental health disabilities
- Practices that promote inclusivity and equity
- Inclusive and special education
- Advancement of disability theory and methodology etc.
